

Reading List for Philosophy (2024-5)

For Philosophy it would be helpful if you could read the following books before term begins in October.

THOMAS NAGEL: What does it all Mean?

In your first term you will study logic. The set text is:

VOLKER HALBACH: The Logic Manual, Oxford University Press, 2010.

Without further help you may find this text difficult, but we recommend that you read at least the first four chapters of The Logic Manual before you get here. If you would like guidance on the more practical aspects of working productively as a philosophy student, you could look at:

Saunders, Mossley, MacDonald Ross, Lamb and Closs, Doing Philosophy: A Practical Guide for Students (2nd edition, 2013).
